

Understanding Credit and Your Credit Score

Monday, July 14, 2014 | 10:00-11:30 a.m.

How important is your credit score? If you're buying a house or car, getting insurance, or even applying for a job, it can be critical. Your credit score, helps lenders determine what interest rate to give you, and many insurers use it to determine your premiums. A low score can even prevent you from renting the apartment you want or, worse yet, make you ineligible for certain jobs. Surprisingly, with so much riding on this number, very few people understand how a credit score is calculated, what the score means, or what they can do to improve their scores. Isn't it time you learned more?.
